

Chesapeake High Chalk Event | PHOTOS

capitalgazette.com/2021/12/07/chesapeake-high-chalk-event-photos

Paul W. Gillespie

December 7, 2021

One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

Supporter Laura Day works on her piece. One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

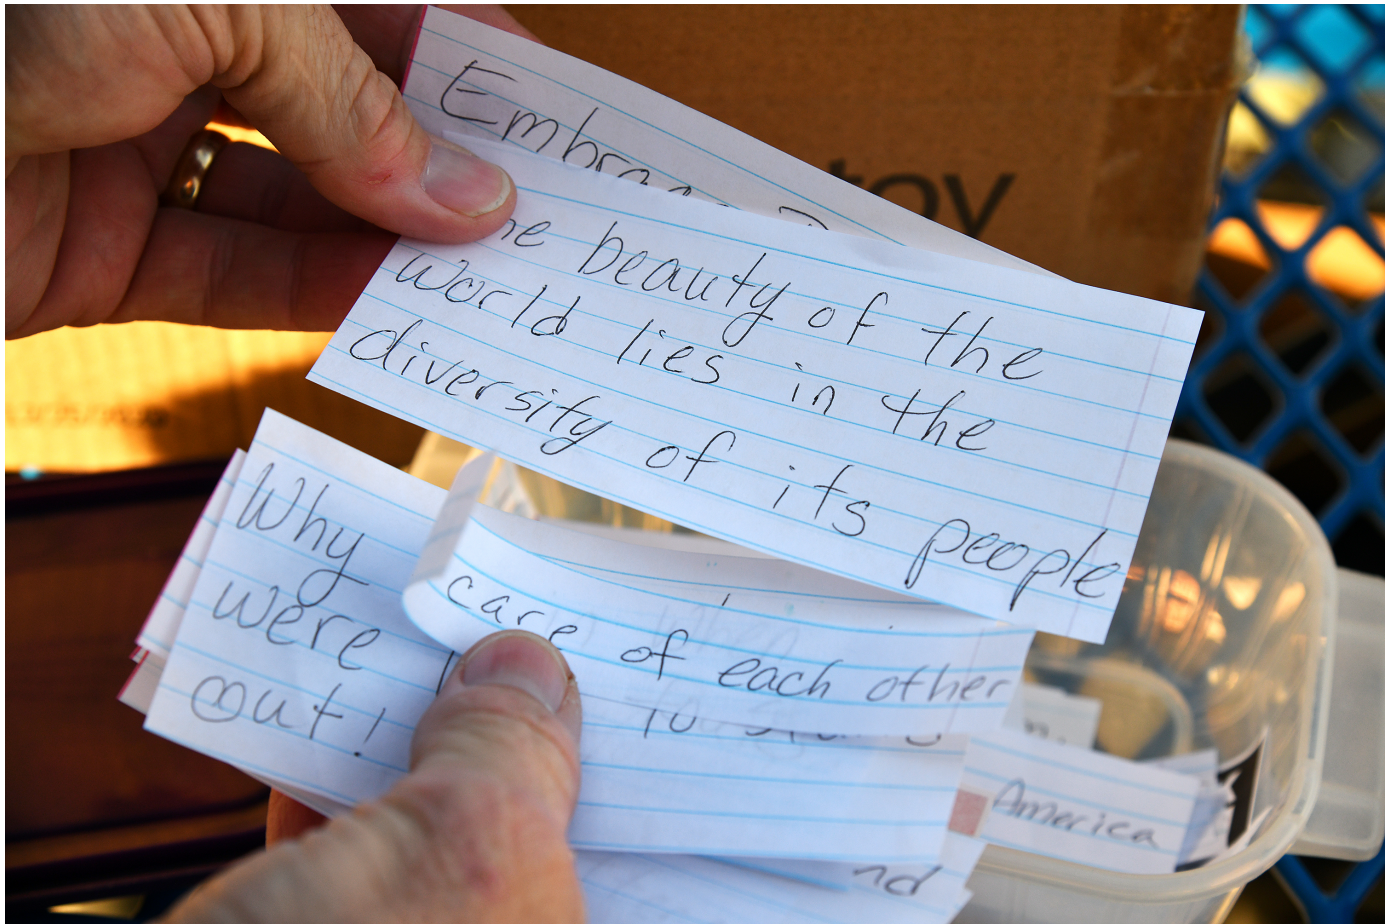

Supporter Erica McFarland chawks the message "All Means All." One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

Supporter Michael Gendel chawks the message "Hate Hurts The Hater." One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

Supporter Laura Day works on her piece. One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

Some possible positive messages were written and put in a suggestion box. One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

Supporter Michael Gendel chawks the message "Hate Hurts The Hater." One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

Chesapeake High student Bridgette Von Valkenburgh, 17, "You Are Worthy of Love." One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

Supporter Debi Jasen works on her piece. One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

Supporter Erica McFarland chawks the message "All Means All." One Pasadena, Annapolis Pride, and other allies, held a chalking event at Chesapeake High School, Tuesday, December 7, 2021, to draw positive messages ahead of the schools planned Unity Day, after flyers for a club supporting LGBTQ students were torn down from the schools halls.

REVCONTENT